

CRUISE CONTROL

Marty A. Lowe tempers the sleekness of an Italian-made megayacht via her laid-back, wabi-sabi touch decks' minimalist Francesco Rota sun beds and lounges.

Sadow, an architecture and design buff who fell for the Sanlorenzo brand's philosophy and approach—"their quality and attention to detail are like nothing I've ever seen"—made minimal modifications once he took possession. "Marty has such a thoughtful and modern aesthetic," he says. He mostly added lighting, accessories, and select furnishings, as well as a curated selection of prints and sculptures from his extensive art collection. "I hand-picked some of my favorite pieces, such as Andy Warhol's Paris Review and Speedy Graphito's House of Cards," which sits on a leather-top console. Graffiti-inflected works by KAWS, Pure Evil, and Keith Haring add a karate chop of color, not to mention irreverence, to the otherwise beachy-neutral tone-on-tone décor. "I provided him a pure palette to add to," Lowe says. Pure, perhaps; purely livable, for sure. —
